THE CLASS OF

presents the

Colonial

Shrewsbury High School

Shrewsbury, Massachusetts

Here at Shrewsbury High School is found a vital part of the zest for life and the great pride in what we have done and will do that must naturally characterize modern youth—pride in our nation, our state, our town, our school, and ourselves.

On the threshold of maturity, we turn back and gaze at what our high school life has meant to us. We realize that it has meant growth—growth in achievement, in personal stature, and in satisfaction. Above all it has helped to instill in us the knowledge and desire to live for ourselves and our fellow men as well. Thus even in looking back, we find a bright portent for our future—something to which to look up.

The present is now upon us. And this present day reveals to us the image of a school moving and ever-growing toward knowledge, maturity, and, above all, life itself.

We have learned to appreciate and to practice grace, style, and laughter. We have, to a great degree, matured into responsible adulthood. Our educational experience involved everything from the solving of simultaneous equations to the ability to laugh at our faults—and then to correct them. This has meant the making of a group of men and women who are aware and alive in every sense of the word.

The future now beckons us. And the future is a gift given only to the young, to mold and to change, as they will. For youth is anticipation and it is ambition. The future and the sense of the unexpected, the sense that our dreams are about to come true—all these make our final steps in high school spirited and confident. The anticipation of the yet-to-come is the very spark of youth and dreams, and it is because of these things that we find our reason to live well, to be proud and confident, to be happy, and above all, to be aware of our surroundings by looking up!

The high school years have taught us that our educational experience must be much more than academic pursuits alone. We have learned that a successful individual is a well-rounded one. In athletics we have come to accept nothing but the highest possible degree of success as our goal. For athletic competition brings physical excellence, and it brings pride in school and individual achievement. It shows us the need to continually strive our hardest, and it reveals our need of team effort and of each other.

At Shrewsbury High our successful competitiveness has made the present more satisfying, and it will make our future more rewarding—something to which we are looking forward.

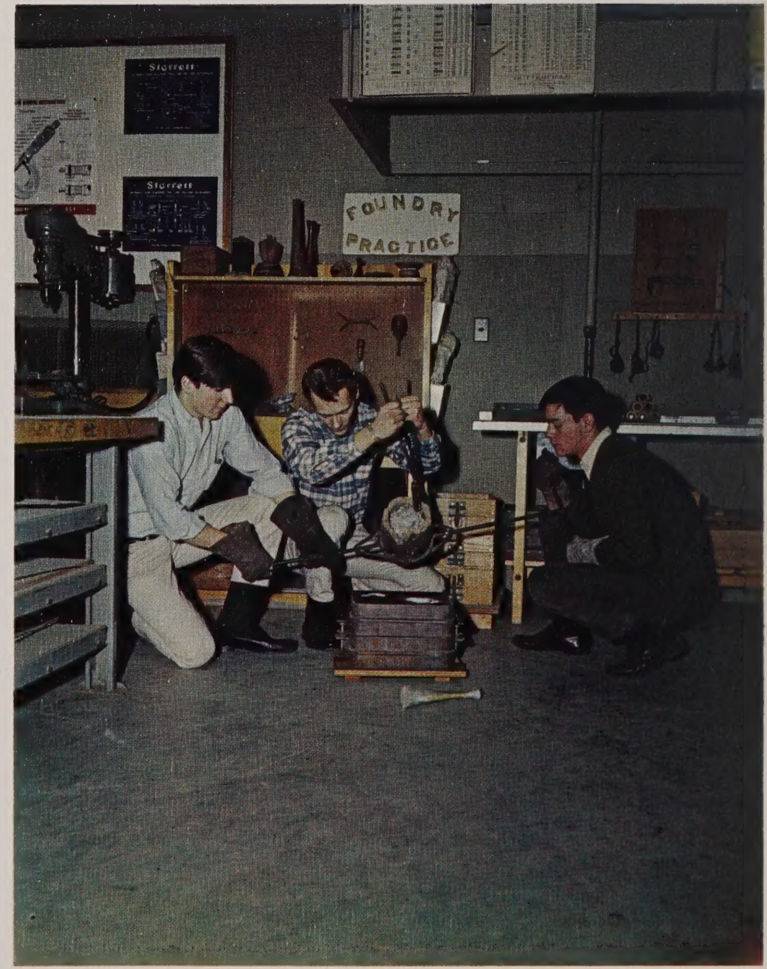
We have found and enjoyed still other pursuits that Shrewsbury High School has to offer. Some of us have seen our own hands, once clumsy and untutored, guide a paintbrush with grace, or mold a lump of clay into a work of art.

We have learned to operate machines whose purpose was once a mystery to us; we have seen the doors unlock on some of the mysteries of science; we have learned the arts of self-expression, home management, music; we have found the value of foreign languages and the dramatic arts. High school life has formed the nucleus of our budding social lives. The games, the parties, the dances, the hootenannies—all will long be remembered and cherished.



One hundred and ninety-eight of us—the Class of '67—now see the portrait that the present paints of us. It portrays us as a group of individuals ready to do more than what is minimally required—in school or in life. We are ready to seek greater goals, dream loftier dreams, and savor more of life than any dared to do before us. We will look up and be glad that high school has meant all these things to us, and we realize that if we have profited well from all that Shrewsbury High School has to offer, then we may well look up towards a promising future.

We have worked hard. We have laughed, cried, sung, danced. In short, we have built the foundations of our character and knowledge in four short years. We entered as children and we leave, we fervently hope, ready for the test of adulthood. A building of concrete and steel has become a premanent part of our spirit. We—the Class of '67—know that the experiences that lie within the walls of this building have taught us that by looking up there is only one way to face our world and our future: to be aware, glad of heart, proud of manner.

In Memoriam

Death is not final, but merely the fulfillment of life. And, we, who are left behind can sustain life on earth beyond the power of death. Such is our memoriam to Billy and Mike, who shall live in our hearts and in our thoughts until, in God's wisdom, the gap between us is narrowed and finally closed.

At end of Love, at end of Life,
At end of Hope, at end of Strife,
At end of all I cling to so—
The sun is setting—must I go?

At dawn of Love, at dawn of Life,
At dawn of Peace that follows Strife,
At dawn of all I long for so
The sun is rising—let me go.

BORN AGAIN

I am born from a hellish death.
Born from destruction, and vanity free.
Born from sin, and death, its fee.

I'll live in God's Kingdom,
Where men are kings;
Where pain and sorrow are none.

I'll laugh and dance,
And cry no more.

I'll sing and play,
And gratefully pray
That I accepted my chance.

Dedication

Most of us realize that a succesful teacher has to possess many assets. Such a teacher is equal parts of devoted educator and outstanding human being. He establishes true educational contact with those he is teaching and makes the process of learning fascinating, lively, and rewarding. He knows when to encourage a laugh and when to settle down in the active pursuit of knowledge.

In this case, the successful teacher to which this book is dedicated has also been an invaluable class adviser. In this role he has been a friend, confidant, and one who has helped us toward solutions to the problems we collectively face as a class.

In promoting interest in his field of science, he has shown his intense interest in the students. He helped launch the Rocket Club of which he is the adviser, and, just recently, played an important part in the purchasing of a telescope which will greatly expand the areas of study in the school's scientific activities.

Such a man values the responsibilities and rewards of shaping those who will shape the future. Such a man realizes the joy and sacrifice of the giving of oneself toward the success and happiness of others.

It is to such a man that we proudly dedicate the 1967 Colonial . . .

In Memoriam

Miss Eleanor L. Warren

People who devote their lives to the betterment of others will always deserve a special place in our memories. Teachers—especially outstanding one—are to be commemorated, for the gift they impart is perhaps the most lasting.

Miss Eleanor Warren, who passed away in February of this year, will be remembered at Shrewsbury High School as such a person. An outstanding teacher whose warm approach to scholarship and firm guidance of her students has benefited many young people, Miss Warren will be remembered for the scholastic excellence she pursued and the excellent human being she was.

Retirements

This year three members of the Shrewsbury High School personnel join the Class of 1967 in saying good-bye to the school of which we have so long been a part. It is with distinct pride in their achievements that all of Shrewsbury High School bids them an affectionate farewell.

Miss Dorothy M. Churchill

Miss Dorothy Churchill, a most widely known and respected educator, has been both a teacher and the Head of the English Department for many years in Shrewsbury schools. She leaves a legacy of outstanding students and alumni who have grown academically under her guidance. Miss Churchill has instilled in her students the same driving curiosity and pursuance of excellence that have marked her years in education.

For many years Miss Etta Prouty has served in several capacities in the Shrewsbury School System. Her outstanding ability as an educator has been exemplified through her responsibilities as a teacher, Head of Geography Department, Assistant Principal and a guidance counselor. Miss Prouty has demonstrated her concern for the cultural and intellectual development of her students as well as forming a fine basis for future educational plans of many young girls. Many men and women have benefited greatly from Miss Prouty's excellent approach to scholarship.

Miss Etta F. Prouty

Mrs. Louise M. Marshon

Mrs. Louise Marshon has long been dedicated to the daily course of challenging secretarial work, a task that is sometimes not fully appreciated. Her devotion to Principal James A. Cooke, the faculty, and the student body has been illustrated by her orderliness and accuracy in all business transactions. Mrs. Marshon's warm smile and friendly personality will long remain in the minds of those who have come to know her.

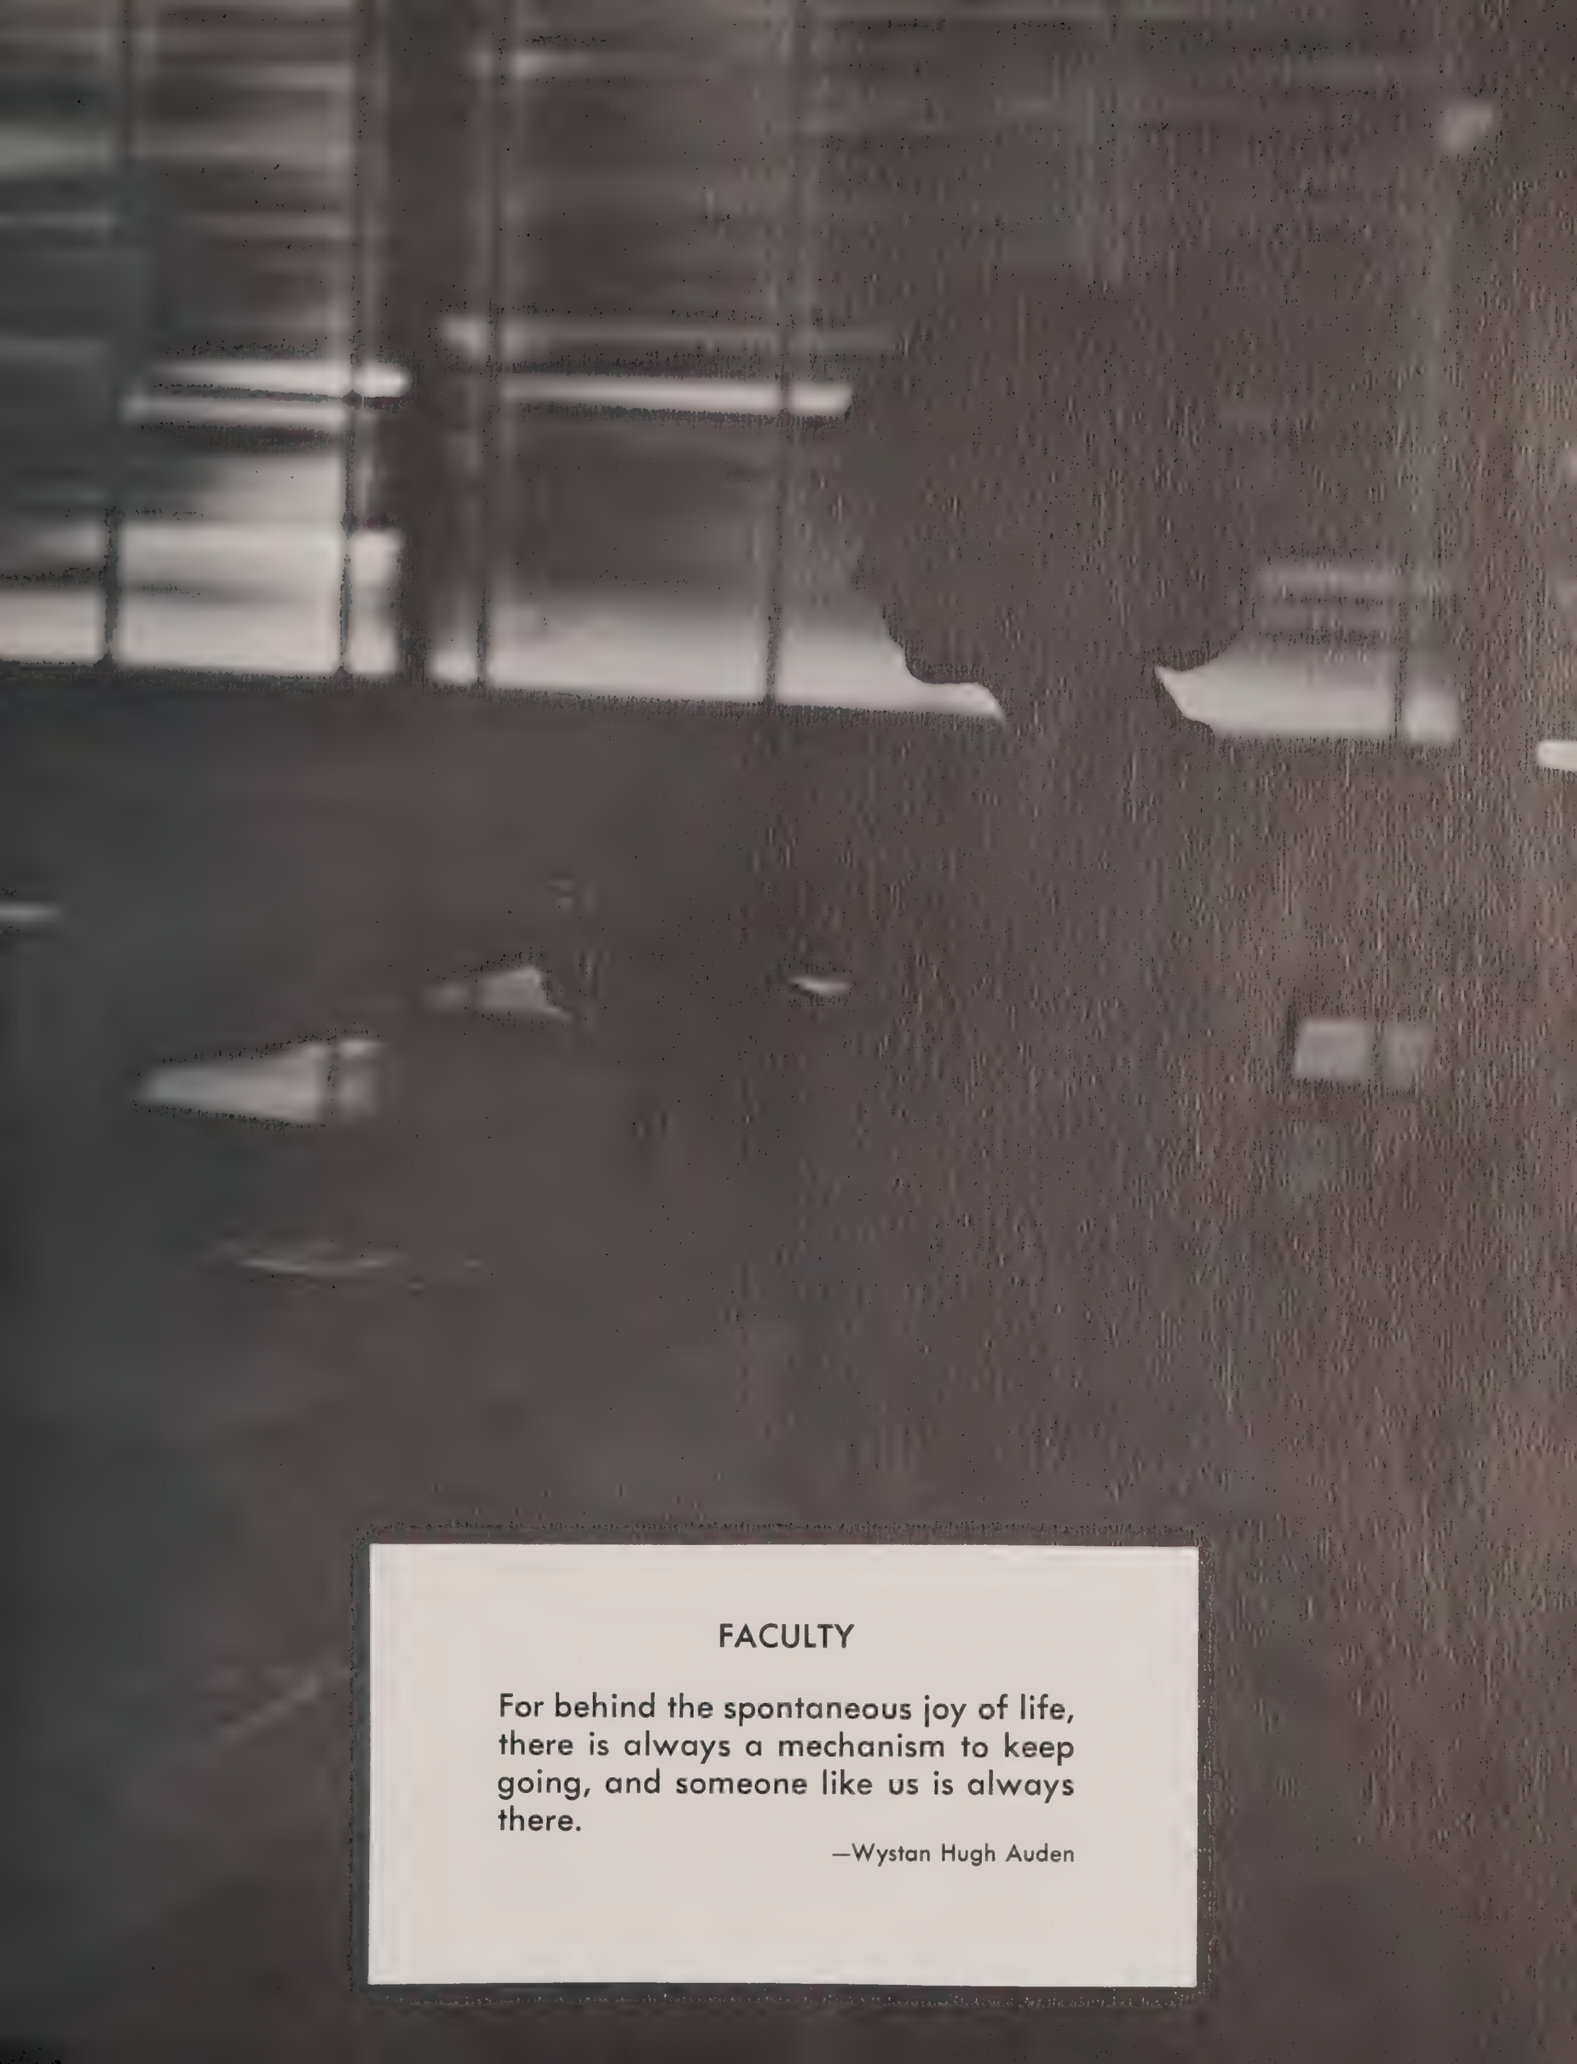
School Committee

Dr. Edward C. Manning
Superintendent of Schools

Mr. Samuel P. Strickland
Assistant Superintendent of Schools

School Committees enjoy a unique status in our society and government structure. To the Shrewsbury School Committee falls the heavy duty of creating educational policy that guides the development of the school population. The Committee sets not only the policy, but also the pace of progress and the tenor for all that is done in the school community.

School Committee Members (L. to R.): Mr. Chandler Creedon, Mr. Robert F. Lutz, Chairman, Mr. Leo R. Corazzini, Mr. Richard F. Morton, Mrs. Nora A. Hakim.



FACULTY

For behind the spontaneous joy of life, there is always a mechanism to keep going, and someone like us is always there.

—Wystan Hugh Auden

Administration

Mr. James A. Cooke
Principal

Mr. William C. Donovan
Vice Principal

Under the able and progressive leadership of Mr. James A. Cooke, Shrewsbury High's capable Principal, the school has expanded not only in size but also in quality. With the increase in school enrollment, new plans and projects must be developed to satisfy the growing demands of the student body. It is necessary not only to innovate the present curriculum but also to encourage new fields of study. The ever-changing times call for this dependable man who is able to meet the demands of the restless, inquisitive students.

Supervising corridors, checking absentees and controlling spirited youths are only a few of the many duties executed by Shrewsbury High School's Vice Principal, Mr. William Donovan. Mr. Donovan exemplifies the calm, soft-spoken administrator, always prepared and willing to listen and deal fairly with the faculty and students. Providing assurance through discipline, guiding and observing always the continuous growth and maturity of the Shrewsbury High School students; this is the goal of our dedicated vice principal.

Miss Etta F. Prouty

Mr. Dorsey shows Carole Rano how to use the College Entrance Viewdeck.

The Shrewsbury High School Guidance Department functions in accordance with the personal needs of individual students to aid them in reaching decisions concerning their future plans.

Students are encouraged early in their freshman and sophomore years to begin thinking about their futures. National examinations and special tests assist the student in finding the vocation for which he is best suited.

Seniors find the Guidance Department indispensable. Along with the invaluable advice of the counselors, the wealth of available information and the newly acquired College Entrance Viewdeck in the guidance office provide an excellent opportunity for assisting seniors in the complicated process of college selection.

The careful counseling at Shrewsbury High School enables the student to meet the problems of the future with a fuller knowledge of his abilities and aptitudes.

English Department

Self expression and the interpretation of other men's thoughts are two of the more important abilities that a student should acquire while in high school. The Shrewsbury High School's English Department provides a diversified program which enables the student to obtain a command of the written and spoken language. Through the various forms of literature offered, the student develops a new awareness of his vast surroundings. In addition to required English courses, a student may elect specialized courses designed to meet his individual needs in journalism, reading, and speech.

Mathematics Department

Mathematics sparks the curiosity of the student and encourages him to use his reasoning powers to the fullest. There are many levels of mathematics offered at Shrewsbury High School which give the students a wide selection of courses that aid in building a strong foundation in this exacting science. Our Mathematics Department offers courses designed to meet the needs of both college and business students.

A good mathematical background is essential in any future career and our mathematics teachers are devoted to preparing their students for the demanding future.

The Shrewsbury High School Math Club is a newly formed organization this year. It is a member of the South-Western County Mathematics League which meets four times a year for varsity competition. Under the direction of Mr. George Cote, the Math Club meetings are scheduled every Monday afternoon to prepare the members for competition in areas such as speed and accuracy. Besides acknowledging the quality of Shrewsbury High School, the Math Club also promotes the mathematical interest of the student. By practicing more complex problems, the student steadily achieves perfection.

Mr. Snyder pauses a moment before explaining a difficult problem to one of his chemistry classes.

With the everchanging and expanding universe it is necessary for Shrewsbury High School students to appreciate the increasing importance of science today. To man, science is a tool with which to apply the explained and to probe the unexplained.

To further this interest, the Science Department offers courses in chemistry, biology, physiology, general science, and physics, all of which appeal to the diversified interests of students. Under the supervision of the science teachers, students are given the opportunity to increase their knowledge in a specific field by personal investigation in laboratory experiments.

Field trips, guest speakers, and group experiments are only a few of the many activities planned for the members of the recently formed Science Club. Students also have the opportunity to join the Rocket Club which enables the members to participate in the actual launching of rockets. The annual Science Fair invites the students to utilize their own scientific backgrounds by individual experimentations in specialized fields.

Social Studies Department

Mr. Theodore P. Lekas
Department Head

History repeats itself, but man also learns through his mistakes. The Social Studies Department at Shrewsbury is concerned with past events as applied to present situations and current events which will lead to the history of the future.

The courses offered to the students are civics, American history, world history, problems of democracy, geography, and earth science. The Social Studies Department aims to develop within the students the cognizance of past and present cultures and to encourage insight into the ever increasing problems of today. To aid in the development of the awareness, this department inaugurated a new community program aimed at stimulating the "Get Out and Vote Campaign." This student project motivated interest in our government's elections and reminded citizens of their duty to vote.

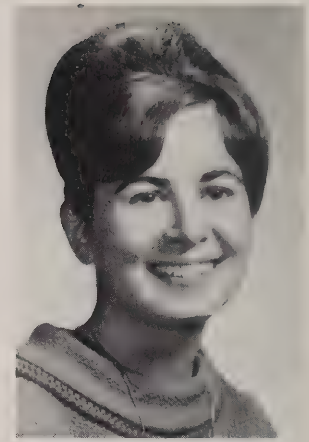
Language Department

Miss Helen M. Parks
Department Head

The language lab offers an opportunity to these French III students to practice speaking and listening to the French language.



Miss Mary Ann Cipro

Miss Pauline S. Howard

Learning a language enables a student to broaden himself intellectually and to better understand the structure of his own language. The Shrewsbury High School student has an opportunity to choose from a variety of languages including French, Latin, and Spanish. With extensive use of the laboratory and national examinations, the language student is better able to adapt himself from the technical aspects of writing to the practical aspects of listening and speaking. Our well-qualified teachers add to the background of the students by introducing cultural material along with the fundamentals of the language. The language clubs, under the auspices of the Language Department, further the student's interest in peoples of other lands and their customs.

Industrial Arts Department

Mr. Clifford H. Fountaine
Department Head

The Industrial Arts Program at Shrewsbury High School provides boys with courses in the manual and technical areas. "Shop" is necessary to complete the education of any boy because utilizing manual dexterity is extremely profitable for future specialized vocations. Every student learns basic skills which will benefit him in an endless number of situations in other fields and in daily life. Our industrial arts teachers instruct the students in metal-work, woodworking, electronics, and mechanical drawing.

Home Economics Department

Miss Alice Hanley
Department Head

Home-economics teacher, Mrs. King, along with seniors Jacqueline Ashworth, Carol Martone, Stephanie Underwood, and Joan Blackmer, sample some of their own cooking.

There is a great challenge in homemaking today, and our home economics teachers are vitally concerned with giving their students a basic background in the supervision of a home. The department at Shrewsbury offers intensive courses in cooking, sewing, family relations, and child care. Each aspect of homemaking cultivates a proficiency in specific domestic arts. The Home Economics Department successfully prepares girls for the many obligations of womanhood.

The Future Homemakers of America is a special organization under the supervision of the home economics teachers which enables the students to get a closer view of more involved homemaking skills.

Mrs. Anna K. Belanger

Mrs. Pauline G. Cohen

Miss Mary T. Donelan

The Shrewsbury High School Business Education Department is fortunate to possess the most modern equipment available to assist with instruction in the latest business techniques. This year the business students have not only the opportunity to utilize manual and electric typewriters and transcribing machines, but also the chance to use the data processing machines. Bookkeeping, typing, economic education, shorthand, and data processing are the courses that constitute our incommeasurable business program.

With the courses offered, the Business Education Department has achieved a two-fold aim. College preparatory students are able to take vital courses in the business area, such as typing and business education. Since this department is also all-inclusive in its approach to commercial education, business graduates are fully aware of the strong competition that awaits them in our fast-moving business world.

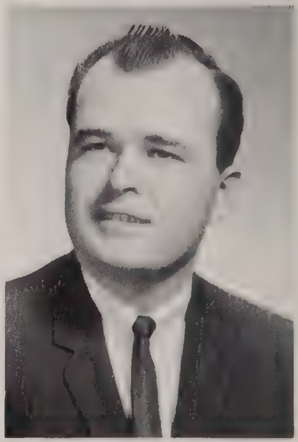
Mrs. Eleanor C. Strand

Seniors Joann Vescere, Barbara Card, and Virginia Angers help in typing the senior write-ups for the yearbook.



Mr. Richard L. Tivnan

Data Processing

A new discovery in the world of progress —Data Processing. This year Shrewsbury High School has adopted a program of punched data cards to achieve greater accuracy, efficiency, and speed in minimizing the amount of work in attendance, daily bulletins, and report cards.

The primary objective of this program is to give the students general knowledge of the data processing technique. About fifty juniors and seniors are participating in this new course. Their skill and practice in the field will lead them upward in the progress of the future.

James Paquette listens attentively while Mr. Tivnan, instructor in Data Processing, gives his first-day explanation to his anticipating students.

All set to go—Mr. Tivnan starts the accounting machine as Henry Grampietro, Joyce Cote, and Dennis Narris stand by to lend support.

Will it work? Janet McArdle, Grace Martinelli, and Butch Vuona seem to have their doubts.

Success! The first daily bulletin is printed on the new IBM machine.

Miss Shea looks relieved. And don't you worry, Mr. Tivnan, it's finally over.

"V" for victory!

Mr. L. Lyman Bowker
Department Head

Art Department

Art is man's way of conveying his deepest emotions and his need for self-expression. The Shrewsbury High School students' projects show remarkable originality and creativity. Provided with a wide assortment of equipment, our artists are able to find an outlet for their energies through painting, drawing, craft-work, and sculpturing. Although expression and creativity depend upon the individual, Mr. Deignan teaches the students the necessary fundamentals and helps form the students' realization of the appreciation of art.

Mr. Joseph E. Deignan

Music Department

Mr. Lorne A. Ford
Department Head

Rhythm, tone, and harmony are a few of the basic principles of music stressed in the Shrewsbury High School Music Department. The annual Christmas Concert and Spring Concert are the highlights of the music year for the band, orchestra, and glee club. The band also sets the pace at football games and the Memorial Day Parade, while the glee club and orchestra combine their efforts for the annual holiday assemblies.

Creating musical appreciation through participation in high school provides for more enjoyment and profit in later years.

Members of the orchestra's string section concentrate for precision in one of their numbers.

Mr. Ralph A. Metcalf

Mr. Louis J. Vella

Physical Education Department

Mr. Francis A. Bergstrom
Department Head
Director of Athletics

Promoting physical fitness and a certain degree of athletic proficiency complements the student's scholastic program. Through the efforts of the Shrewsbury High School Physical Education Department, all students have the privilege of receiving weekly instruction.

Football, basketball, baseball, and gymnastics make up the rigorous schedule of the boys' gym classes. The students learn not only physical coordination, but also cooperation and good sportsmanship through team effort and individual effort.

Skill, grace, and group organization formulate the girls' program of physical activity. Exercise encourages agility, and gymnastics advances physical prowess.

Librarian

Intellectual stimulation, extensive research material, and a comprehensive study area are vital requirements for a school library working to provide for the needs of every student. With the aid of Mrs. Ober and her library staff, the Shrewsbury High School students are able to find information needed for class assignments and independent study. Mrs. Ober's efficiency and knowledge make the school's library informative and up-to-date.

Nurse

In the course of a normal school day the Health Office is visited by many students for a variety of reasons. Mrs. Quatela, Shrewsbury High School's nurse, aids ailing students, assists a doctor in examining students, supervises hearing and eye tests, and sees to the establishment of any special health precautions that are applicable to the school and the students' health protection.

Mrs. Hilda Quatela

Mrs. Marion I. Casten

Office Staff

Printing notices, making out homeroom lists, taking phone calls, and keeping records of all students are only a few task of the hardworking office staff—the backbone of Shrewsbury High School. Their able assistance produces the smooth efficiency necessary to operate the complexities of the school.

'67 Colonial Yearbook

Mr. Paul Lavelle
Yearbook Adviser

Christine Petersen
Editor-in-Chief

I wish to express my sincere thanks to my staff for the many long hours that they have dedicated to the 1967 Colonial. Their efficiency, willingness to work, and ambition have demonstrated their immeasurable interest and concern for the yearbook.

The yearbook staff has formed the nucleus for the Colonial, but a yearbook can not be produced by just a small group of individuals—it must be created and and developed by the entire student body. My many thanks go to those students, teachers, and administrative personnel whose assistance has helped unexpressedly to publish the Colonial. On behalf of the yearbook staff and the Graduating Class of 1967, I wish to extend a very, very special and heartfelt "thanks" to Mr. Paul Lavelle, our yearbook adviser, without whom this yearbook would have remained a dream. His untiring patience, experienced advice, and unselfishness make every attempt at appreciation seem inadequate. I personally wish to thank one hundred ninety-seven classmates—the Class of 1967—for granting me the opportunity to give so little and gain so much. Their support and encouragement when so desparately needed have given me the incentive to do my best for them.

To next year's staff and seniors—the very best of good luck and success in your yearbook plans. Really want to make your yearbook "tops" because you will come to realize that Shrewsbury High School deserves only the very best!

Their lives thenceforth have separate ends,
And never can be one again.

—HENRY W. LONGFELLOW

Guiding Hands Help . . .

Miss Mary Ann Cipro

Without the devoted help of five ambitious men and women, the Class of 1967 could not have been so prosperous. There may be willing, hard-working students ready to meet the challenges of education, but there must always be a mature adult nearby to lend a helping hand. Our dedicated advisers have guided us in planning the foundation for our high school career. Their never-ending energy, continuous assistance, and inexhaustible patience have never failed to encourage us in pursuing and achieving higher goals.

The Class of 1967 leaves with a new enlightenment and a deep gratitude to the advisers who have helped to fulfill the Seniors' dreams of success.

. . . Those Who Lead

Robert Haddad
President

In all journeys of life, there are those destined to lead. These are our leaders. They have been chosen for their character and integrity, and they have accomplished much for the Class of 1967.

A class is unable to survive without the combined efforts of the executive board. Intelligence, responsibility, ambition, and loyalty are the qualities possessed by our four senior officers. Through the endeavors of President Robert Haddad and Vice President Dena Lapriore, who have been in office for the past two years, the class has gained more unity and spirit. Accordingly, Secretary Susan Giofreda and Treasurer Josephine DiLeo have kept accurate recordings of class minutes and financial transactions since our freshman year.

The remaining members of the Class of 1967 are the followers; the leaders have overcome many obstacles, widening the paths through which we have traveled and inspiring us to look upward to the future.

Recipients Of

The test performances of twelve seniors placed them among the top seven percent of students who took the qualifying test in the spring of 1966 and in the top two per cent of students expected to graduate from United States high schools in 1967. This achievement indicates outstanding ability to do successful college work.

BOYS' STATE

GIRLS' STATE
Jean Larson

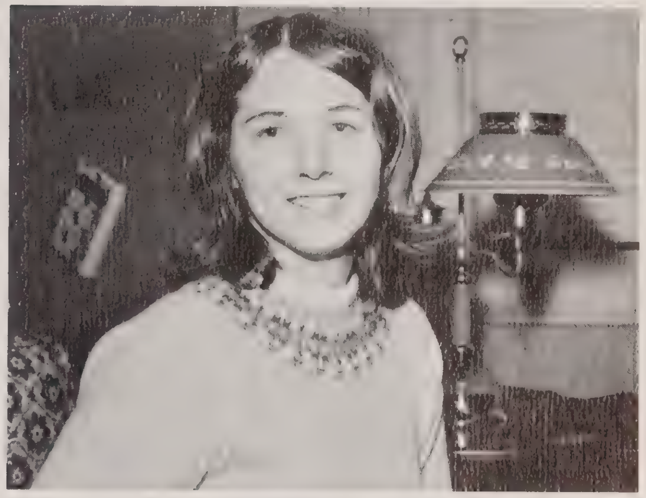
Last summer four students from Shrewsbury High School attended the Boys' and Girls' State Programs held at the University of Massachusetts and Bridgewater State College, respectively. The conferences were sponsored by the local American Legion Posts. The students were selected by faculty recommendations because of their high scholastic standings and distinctive qualities of character and leadership.

Awards And Honors

HARVARD BOOK AWARD
and
STUDENT GOVERNMENT DAY REPRESENTATIVE
Kenneth Oclatis

Every year the Worcester Harvard Club presents an award to a junior boy who is superlative not only in scholarship, but in other fields as well. For the Class of 1967, Kenneth Oclatis received the prize of The Harvard Book, a collection of essays by the graduates and faculty of Harvard.

On April 7, 1967 Kenneth attended an assembly at the State House in Boston as the school's delegate to the Massachusetts Student Government Day. He was elected by members of the junior and senior classes because of his interest and knowledge in governmental affairs.



D.A.R. REPRESENTATIVE
Christine Petersen

The National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution offers the D.A.R. Good Citizen award to a girl of outstanding character from her senior class. Christine was chosen by the student body and faculty for her dependability, service, leadership, and patriotism.

STUDENT COUNCIL NATIONAL DELEGATE
Mary Campaniello

A member of the Student Council is selected each year to attend the annual convention of National Student Councils. Mary, possessing outstanding leadership qualities, was chosen as the school's delegate to attend the conference held in Tacoma, Washington.

JEWISH WAR VETERANS' BROTHERHOOD REPRESENTATIVE
Jane Prout

Each year the Student Council votes on a student who best represents brotherhood in the entire school. This year Jane was chosen because of her initiative, imagination, and good will to participate in this Human Relations project.

Collins, C. McIntosh, P. Card, K. Kelley, E. Rice, C. Melanson, M. Campaniello. Third row: C. Peters, J. Collins, P. Belanger, J. Townsend, J. Kaletski, R. Haynes, A. Larson.

Mr. Sullivan reviews the results of the elections with eager candidates.

The Student Council, a representative body composed of eighteen members from all four classes, has the responsibility of maintaining a good relationship between the administration and the student body. This year the Council has left its meetings open to the homeroom representatives and faculty members who have suggestions or complaints. The Student Council annually supervises class elections and the Jewish War Veteran's election. Promoting permissible student conveniences, the Student Council provided the student body with new records, a better selection of ice cream, and requested an extra minute between hour classes. Presently, one of the major undertakings of some of the Council members is to help establish "The Cayve"—a teen center for the students for informal socializing.

This past year delegates from the Council represented Shrewsbury High at a number of conventions, including the conventions for the Massachusetts and National Association of Student Councils. The able leadership of the Shrewsbury High School Student Council has helped SHS to gain self pride as well as the respect of neighboring schools.

The curtain has fallen on another year of Masque and Wig. The frustration of rehearsals, the panic of opening night, and the relief of a job well done are far behind, but the uniqueness and fascination of the stage will remain forever.

Under the guidance of Mr. Kevin Rose, the never-tiring director and adviser, the club has instilled in each of its members the desire to work and the will to succeed. With this determined spirit, the Shrewsbury High School Masque and Wig has tasted the realm of the professional.

Adviser Mr. Rose emphasizes the importance of efficient committee work for the success of any production.

THE THINKERS—Mr. Rose and John Kaletski listen enthusiastically during a meeting.

Auditioning, Casting,

Juniors Jane Cox, Karen Anderson, and Brad Hunter celebrate a success.

The Class of 1968 was very successful with its Junior Class Play, "The Man Who Came to Dinner." This year, as in others, Masque and Wig aided the juniors in stage and technical aspects of the production. Mr. Rose directed the comedy with the aid of Student Director Rebecca Deering. Ted Crommett and Jane Cox played the leading roles.

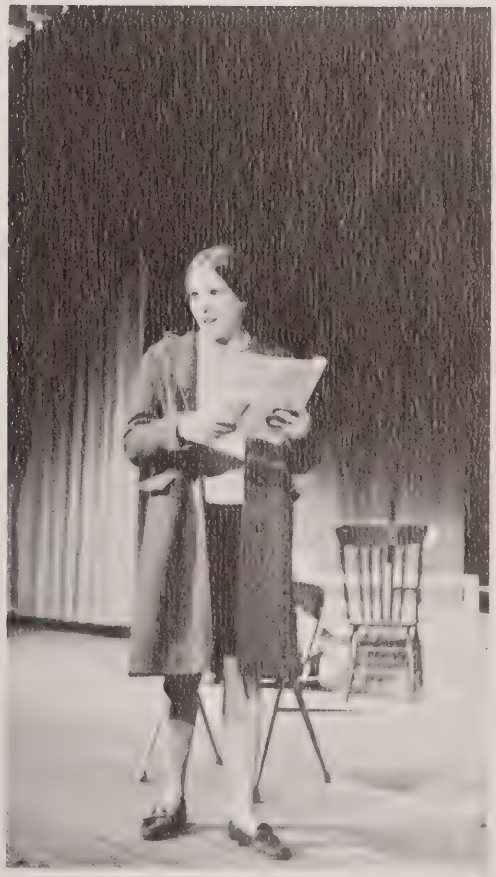
This year Masque and Wig presented a Christmas pageant, "The Beginning." It is a unique play written by Masque and Wig member James Gilmond. The scenery was simple, and the costumes and make-up colorful and imaginative. The beauty of the presentation expressed the play's majestic mood. It was a first in the club's history—a play written, designed, directed, and performed solely by the students.

The entire cast appears in a tableau at the end of the Christmas pageant.

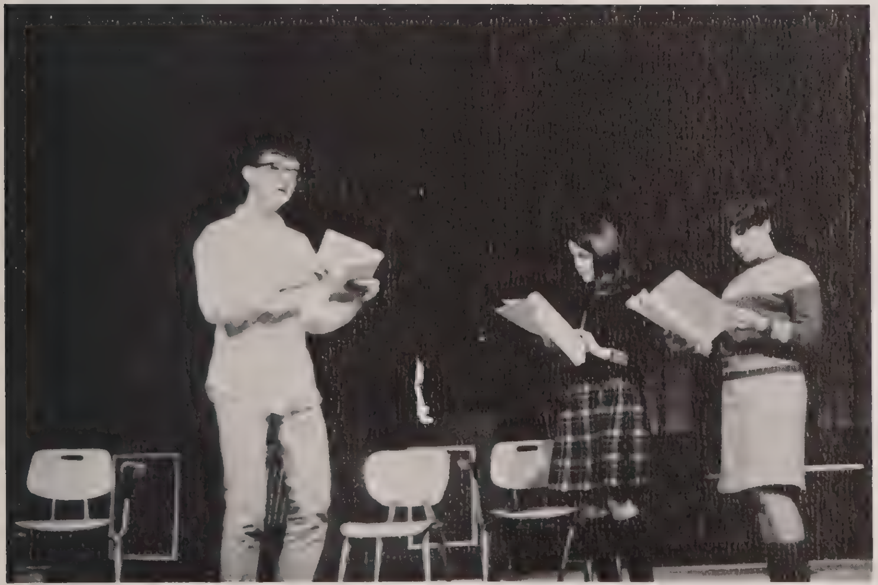
And Performing

March 18 brought the Massachusetts Regional Drama Festival again this year—and again a victory for the Shrewsbury thespians! This year's entry was the French satire "Precious Damsels" by Moliere. Preparing was hectic work. The competition is always impressive and the cast knew it—this resulted in long rehearsals and tense actors. But the reward was well worth the effort. Three members of the cast—Ted Crommett, Dena Lapriore, and Ray Stoddard—were named to the All-Star Cast. This winning accomplishment in the Regional Festival gave the cast the opportunity to compete in the Massachusetts State Drama Festival in Hancock Hall, Boston on April 1.

The members are all encouraged to audition for the productions. A few hopeful members read through scripts.



"You want me to play it HOW?"



Ray Stoddard rehearses his leading role of the Marquis de Mascarille from ""''Precious Damsels" with Dena Lapriore and Frances Ezen.

Awareness and the ability to express one's self are powerful possessions in a modern society. The National Forensic League aims at developing a strong combination of both these attributes in those who join its ranks. The intellectual conflict of debate, the beauty of the dramatic arts, the color and power of extemporaneous speech, and many other forms of expression are revealed and learned in NFL. And while the competition is often fierce, the friendships made are often lasting. SHS NFL'ers have participated in the exclusive National Tournaments, held as far away as California and New Mexico, and are familiar sights manning the football game concessions here at home. Such activities as the tournament trips and the annual banquet make NFL one of the most rewarding extra-curricular pursuits of high school. The work is demanding, the rewards are indeed great, the loyalties and team spirit are indomitable. Shrewsbury High can be proud of its NFL'ers who have built a reputation of excellence known and respected throughout New England and the United States.

La Vie!

With adviser Mme. Spezeski, President Nancy Hepburn and Secretary Christine Petersen talk over ideas for the next meeting.

French club members show their talent by putting on a skit to display the various occupations in France.

At Shrewsbury High School language plays an important part in a student's curriculum. To make the study of each language more effective there are various clubs for the students to join. "Le Cercle Francais," the French Club, has a membership of about sixty. The senior executive board plans monthly meetings that not only entertain the audience, but also educate them on French culture and traditions. Among this year's activities were a movie, French games, two guest speakers who had traveled to France, and a tableau of students showing the different French occupations. The club ends each year by gathering for the annual banquet held at "La Petite Auberge," a genuine French restaurant. It is then that one realizes how fortunate he is to belong to the club—he must order his entire meal in French!

Mrs. Donahue shows slides to emphasize her talk on her visit to France.

Adviser Mr. Sullivan plans an upcoming meeting with the officers.

"Pro Deo et Patria"—these familiar words greet the eyes of Latin scholars as they meet for Latin Club every month. Listening to the members enthusiastically discussing ancient Rome, watching them at work during a cake sale, or observing them struggle over nation-wide Latin examinations, one begins to wonder why Latin is considered dead. Despite the fact that the conversational use of Latin is extinct, the spirit and dignity of a golden language, daughter of a golden age, lives on in the efforts of the Shrewsbury High School Latin Club. Under the guidance of adviser Mr. Sullivan, the officers and members of the Club have worked ambitiously to enrich the legacy left to them and to the world by ancient Rome.

Eyes"

There is a club for students who strive to learn and cultivate their talents in writing and speaking the romantic language of Spain. "El Circulo de Espanol" is an organization which demonstrates to its members the civilization and culture of the Spanish-speaking countries throughout the world. The chief goal of the Spanish Club is to enable its members to make use of the vocabulary which they have acquired and to inspire them to continue their studies. A highlight of this year was a play presented by some of the members and written by senior Alan Goshgarian. A service project undertaken by the club is the sponsorship of a Peruvian child. By such activities the members increase and appreciate their knowledge of the land and its peoples.

La Cucaracha! La Cucaracha!

The girls converse in search of an answer.

Spanish Club members listen intently during the meeting.

Time out for an explanation by Miss Howard, the club adviser.

Mr. Ford stands above the band as both a conductor and a source of inspiration.

President Ken Oclatis demonstrates his truly professional style.

The Band

Tom Daviau, Greg Martin, Alan Swenson, and Jim Gilmond play their sax parts a la Stan Getz.

Sue Hoctor proves that through all that tubing comes a really beautiful sound.

Music is a transient art. It transports the performer and audience to a unique sensitivity with which to appreciate its subtilities of expression; it guides their imagination through a world of sound into a universe of unexplored sensations and ideas. The goal of the band is to give order and meaning to the music it performs, to instill in its members an appreciation of the beauty of the art, and to use their efforts for the benefit and enjoyment of the school and the community. Under the guidance and inspiration of its director, Mr. Lorne Ford, the Shrewsbury High School Band has expanded the types of music it undertakes and has continued to achieve distinction and excellence.

If we can't have 76, then Russ Stevens, Bill Dagget, and Craig Buffington's trombones are just as good.

Where There Is Harmony,

Delightful, fascinating music fills the air as deft fingers glide over inanimate wood and metal instruments—music that brings joy to the heart and sparkle to the eye. The Shrewsbury High School Orchestra directed by Mr. Ralph Metcalf plays for many occasions—National Honor Installation, Thanksgiving Assembly, Christmas Concert, and graduation. Mr. Metcalf tries to select music from a wide variety—baroque, classical, contemporary—thus insuring a good musical background for the members of the orchestra. The group experiments with the music and approves the pieces which will be performed. Many long hours of practice, lessons, and rehearsals have been spent to prepare for the enjoyable concerts—both for the audience and the participants.

There Is Music

True perfection is only achieved through hours of rehearsing.

Finger Coordination and close attention to one's music are two techniques of an accomplished violinist like Ted Crommett.

Jean, is it true that string bass players have more fun?

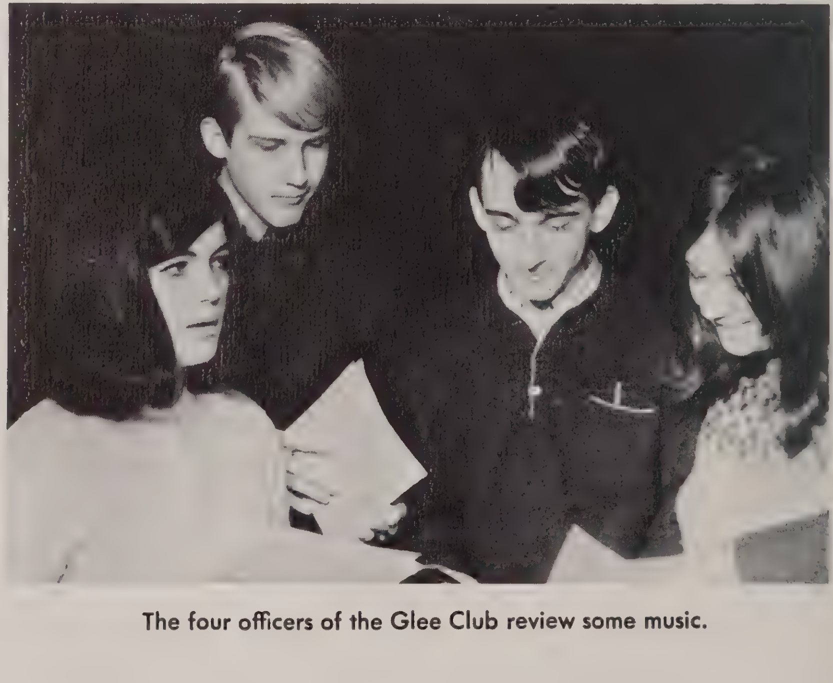
"Phew!"



The four officers of the Glee Club review some music.

To Sing

"All together now, one, two, three . . ."

The soprano section goes over the presentation of Bach's "Honor and Glory."

For many years glee clubs have been known for their trite versions of spiritual and popular songs—not so at Shrewsbury. Under the able direction of Mr. Louis Vella, the ambitious Shrewsbury High Glee Club is equally at home with Bach, Beethoven, or Gershwin. The Club is praised not only in Shrewsbury, but throughout Worcester County and Massachusetts for the high quality of its music.

Representative of the group's tremendous effort is the highly successful "Trial By Jury," an operetta by Gilbert and Sullivan which the Club staged first as an assembly and later as a major production. The singers also perform at the numerous school assemblies, the annual Christmas Concert, and the May Music Festival. These are only some of the many examples that help to make the Glee Club a fine and polished instrument.

For its main presentation of the year, the Glee Club, under the direction of Mr. Vella and Mr. Rose of the Drama Department, put on Gilbert and Sullivan's "Trial By Jury." The group received much praise for its interpretation of this classic operetta.

Clear The

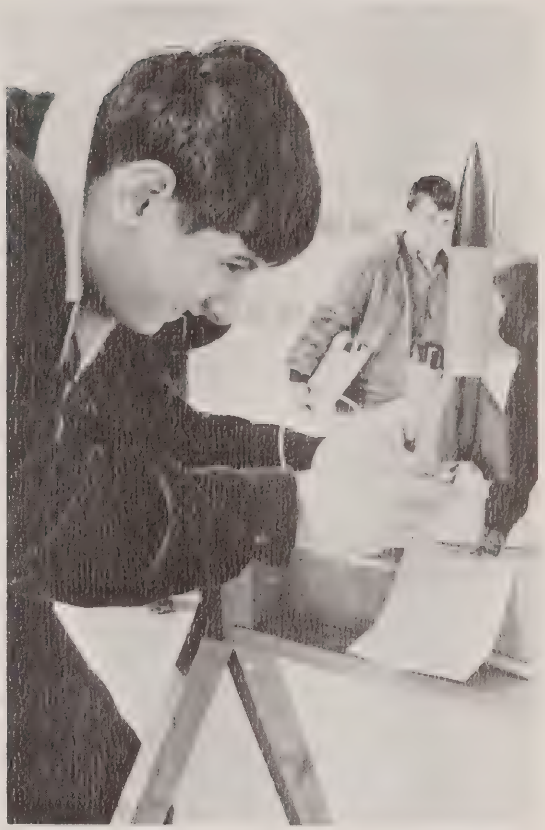
Glenn Boutilier and Charles Kaufman carefully select the right engine for the next launch.

Lift-off, retro-fire, orbital velocity, weightlessness—every day these terms become more and more familiar as the space age moves on. At Shrewsbury High School our "space age" began last year with the founding of the rocket club. Since its inception, its members have been working diligently to produce their own miniature rockets. Their efforts, though enjoyable, are serious. Long hours are spent designing, building, perfecting, and experimenting with the rockets. But whether or not the launch is successful, experience and knowledge are gained for the future.

Under the guidance of Mr. Flynn, the rocket club is further expanding its background with the purchase of a telescope. No longer will the young rocketeers be held in the earth's atmosphere, for now they can gaze upward toward the stars.

Launching Pad

With everything nearing readiness·the electric starter is prepared.



Ed Kowaleski makes a final adjustment before the launch.

This year the rocket club widened its range with the addition of a reflecting telescope. Many new fields of study will be opened up with the aid of this invaluable tool.

Curiosity

"Do you hear what I hear?"

Mr. Ferris reviews with the club the highlights of a scientific movie.

Science! For some, this word conjures up images of unsolvable experiments and equations, but to the members of the Shrewsbury High School Science Club it creates visions of adventure, wonder, and excitement.

The Club's many interesting meetings give aspiring scientists the opportunity to supplement their knowledge and understanding of the world about them. Under the direction of Mr. Charles Ferris, the members are able to profit from the advice of specialists and the experience of group participation.

The members of this active club wait for a frequent after-school movie to begin.

Exploring The

Two of the judges ponder over one of the scientific displays.

Our world—a new and different world—one that changed yesterday, is changing today, and will change tomorrow. With their imaginative scientific experiments on various principles and theories, Shrewsbury High students in the 1967 annual Science Fair showed how the world is progressing. In the fields of biology, chemistry, and physics, the exhibitors displayed their interest in this highly scientific era. The efforts of the students were recognized when prizes and honorable mentions were awarded to the deserving winners. The fair provides an excellent opportunity for future scientists to prepare themselves for the complicated age that awaits them.

Editor Diane Barsoum reviews the final publication of the Town Crier.

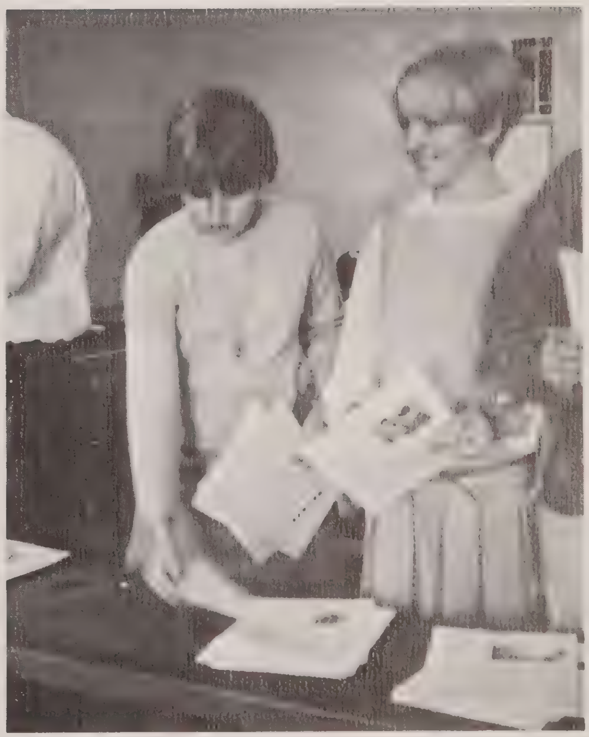
Presses!

Days of interviewing, research, careful thought and planning—all are part of putting together a colorful, readable paper. It is the duty of the Shrewsbury High Staff to make the Town Crier, the school's newspaper, an informative and reliable publication of interest to the entire student body. With the advice of Mr. John Tsombakos, this able, hard-working crew has done well, for the Town Crier has reached a large circulation, and each month many students from all classes read the student spotlights, sports' reviews, editorials, and the popular "Tobias Howe" along with other news-worthy articles. The journalism class and staff also produce the Colonial Journal, a literary magazine composed of creative writings from the student body.

The first-hand experience in publications introduces the staff to the exciting and pace-setting world of journalism.

Seniors Ed Jarvis and Dan Germain are often seen supervising the press.

Maureen O'Brien and Beverly Marcimo glance at some articles in a completed edition.



Sue Borglund and Kathy Carey devote their time to the tedious task of compiling each paper individually.

Linda Kreft sorts the papers into piles before the hectic distribution to homerooms.

Helping People

First row, left to right: L. Gaffney, S. Maniero, Mrs. Joanne McCullough (Adviser), P. Meunier, S. Douslin (Secretary), Mrs. Phyllis King (Adviser), J. Mangs (Treasurer), J. Pacillo, J. Vescere, L. Each representative receives a Red Cross Journal that explains the duties and services of the organization.

Along with Mrs. King and Mrs. McCullough, their advisers, student-elected representatives from each homeroom unite their efforts to bring aid to needy peoples of the world. To help people help themselves, the main objective of the Junior Red Cross, is carried out under the able leadership of President Peter Casey and the other student officers. The group sponsors several activities during the course of the school year including a membership drive and the sending of a Red Cross chest to some needy area. The work and efforts of this group are not only appreciated by its beneficiaries, but here at Shrewsbury as well, for the Junior Red Cross allows each student to become aware of his civic responsibility.

Help Themselves

A modern library, especially one used by many students day after day, will be effective only with the help of willing, hard-working people who are interested in the library. Shrewsbury High School 0-20 Aides are kept busy shelving books, filing magazines, and helping students find valuable research material. Headed by Mrs. Ober, the school library has become more efficient and better equipped with information useful to the faculty and the student body.

"What a lovely party!"

SHOMTY exists in order to prepare its members for a better employee-employer relationship. This commercial-minded club emphasizes the importance of understanding and cooperation in today's challenging business world. Junior and senior girls who are taking two business subjects are eligible for membership. During the year the girls carry on such activities as cake sales, an annual Christmas party, candy sale, and the giving of a basket which this year went to the Worcester State Hospital. Other projects included a trip to the State Mutual Insurance Company and a banquet at the end of the year. The service projects, social events, and fund-raising activities help develop and cultivate leadership and civic-minded qualities in its members who are soon to grace the ever-changing business community.

It is better to give, than to receive.

The Future Homemakers of America Club is composed of those girls who are presently taking either Home Economics, Family Living, or Home Management. Through working together with Mrs. King on different projects, the girls are taught how to cope with the problems of domestic life. By devoting much of their time making and distributing gifts to the orphans at Christmas or bringing cheer to the elderly, the girls have shown their generosity and good will. They are fine examples of model homemakers.

The skills and the agility of young bodies are annually displayed by the girls and boys of Shrewsbury High School who participate in the Gym Show. The show involves those students fortunate enough to be gifted in coordinating their bodies to various displays of tumbling, climbing, and working out on the apparatus. The participants are highly devoted to disciplining their muscles and gymnastic talents. While the work is often hard and strenuous, the homeroom period practices are enjoyed by all. These students share in a worthwhile experience encompassing a program of complete physical fitness.

President Mike Quirk formulates plans for the May Honor Society Installation.

The National Honor Society is not only character, leadership, service, and scholarship to its members, the Society is much more. The Honor Society represents a spirit, a feeling of completion and reward for years of effort to the school and community. However, the members realize that there is much more to be done. This year, under the wise and invaluable guidance of Miss Mary O'Hara, the Honor Society has attempted many ambitious programs. A Christmas basket was prepared for a needy couple. The monument on the common was decorated for Memorial Day. A scholarship was again established for Honor Society members. A far-ranging tutoring program was put into effect. The final major project was a spring Regional Honor Society Conference sponsored and hosted by the Shrewsbury Chapter.

For its members, National Honor Society does not end in high school, for the spirit that was fostered will remain forvever.

Honor Society members volunteer their services for the Regional Conference on April 1.

The Colonials go through a short period of conditioning during a pregame workout.

"Practice makes perfect" is easily applied to the sport of football. Each afternoon the players drill many long hours in an effort to gain perfection. The coaches work far into the night planning game strategy. All of this work leads the public to question, "Was all of this work really worth the trouble?" Everyone learns the answer by late Saturday afternoon.

1966

What makes a championship football team? One of the many good answers is the ability to work as a team. A good club must have eleven players on the field who work as a unit, not as eleven individual players. The players must be able to blend their own individual skills together in order to form a top-flight team. Each week our squad must be willing to strive its hardest to bring home a victory for Shrewsbury High School. The 1966 Colonial football team made all these efforts. That is why Shrewsbury High School gained the Central Massachusetts Class "B" Title.

The SHS defensive line sets itself to knock heads with the rival forward wall.

The players on the bench watch intently as the action on the field increases.

MOST VALUABLE PLAYER

OF THE

BOB

SEASON

CATALINA

To complement a strong outside runner, a good football team should have a jarring, bone-crushing fullback. Powerful Bob Catalina is that man. Shrewsbury's "Mr. Inside" often left a host of enemy defenders in his wake on the strength of his powerful thrusts through the middle. An all-around player, Bob, as well as run, could punt with the best of them and play linebacker on defense like a demon. Bob's tremendous playing during the season made him an obvious choice as "The Most Valuable Player" for the football season of 1966.

TED STIMETS

Every good football team must have an outstanding breakaway threat in its backfield. Shrewsbury High's outside terror is swift halfback Rich Lysik. Electricity fills the air each time he gets his hands on the ball and starts to tear around the end. Rich capped a fine season by being presented the Ted Stimets Memorial Award as the top Colonial player in the annual Thanksgiving Day game against Auburn. Hats off to Shrewsbury's Rich Lysik!

Excellent leadership is a prime necessity for success in the sport of basketball. The 1966-67 Shrewsbury Colonials were blessed in this respect. At the very outset of the season, the Colonials were defeated three consecutive times. They never lost again in regular season play. Behind the able leadership of Coach William Paquette and Co-captains Mike Cipro and Guy Ferrante, Shrewsbury High proceeded to defeat their next sixteen opponents. In so doing, the Colonials breezed undefeated to championships in the Midland League and the Central Massachusetts Conference. The 1966-67 Shrewsbury High hoopsters are to be congratulated for their tremendous comeback.

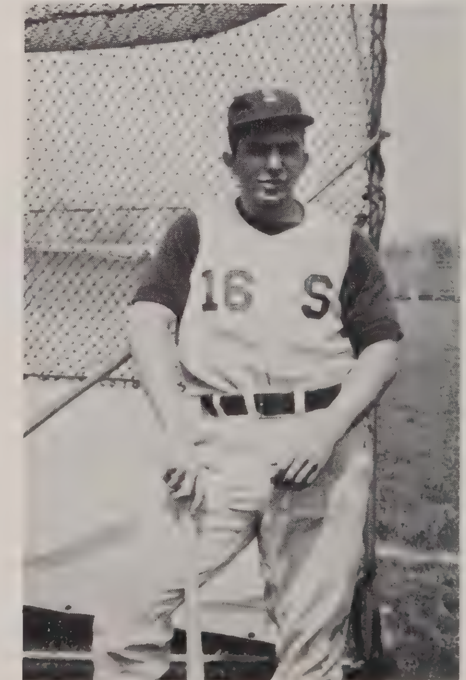
Nello Coppellotti

CO-CAPTAINS

A vital part of any baseball team is the shortstop. He must be the leader of the infield. This year shortstop Nello Coppellotti takes on additional responsibility, that of co-captain. His take-charge qualities make him an excellent choice.

A baseball team is only as good as its pitching. Shrewsbury High School has one of the best in co-captain Bob Catalina. This veteran hurler has been the mainstay of the ballclub for four years. He also has shown that he is the team leader, on and off the field.



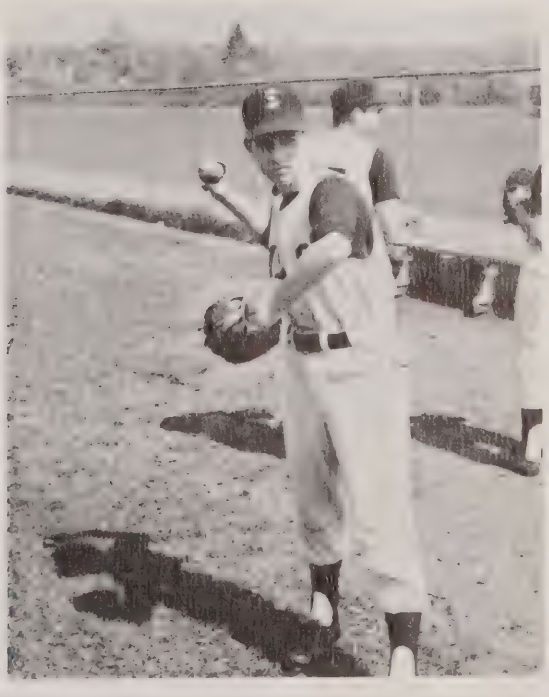
Bob Catalina

of the Bat

No athletic team could be very successful without a good coach to guide it. Coach Kleminich knows exactly how to deal with players and is able to bring out the best in a participant. Evidence of this is shown in the won-lost column. Over the past decade, a Kleminich-coached Shrewsbury baseball team has never suffered a losing season.

The sport of baseball is not an easy one. A player must develop his talents in every phase of the game. He must be able to run, throw, hit, and excel at a number of positions on the field. The Shrewsbury High ballplayers are prime examples of versatility resulting in winners.

Outfielder Rocky Blunt is learning the fundamentals of playing third base.



Infielder Bob Rooney sharpens up his throwing arm. It is possible that Bob could wind up in the outfield.

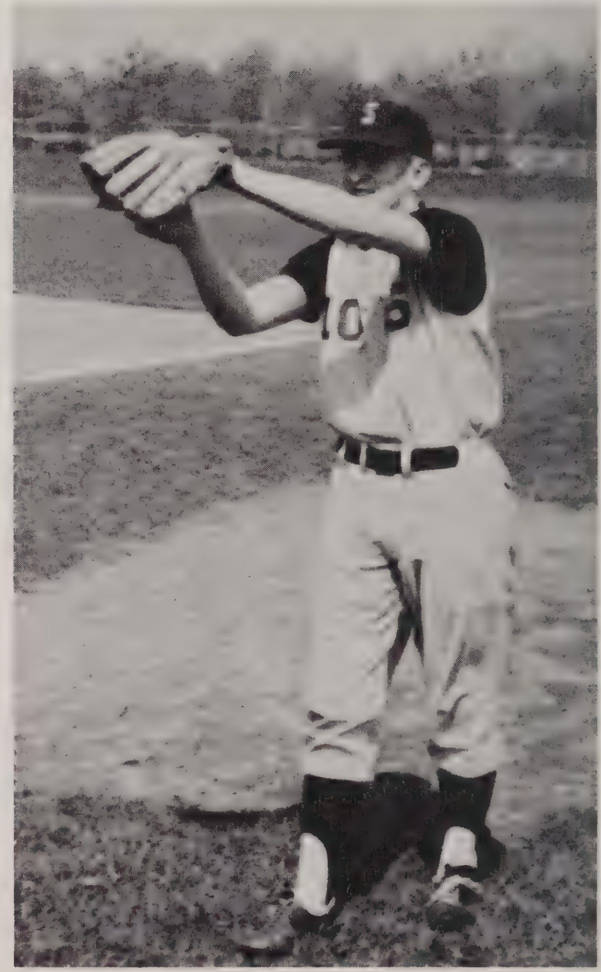
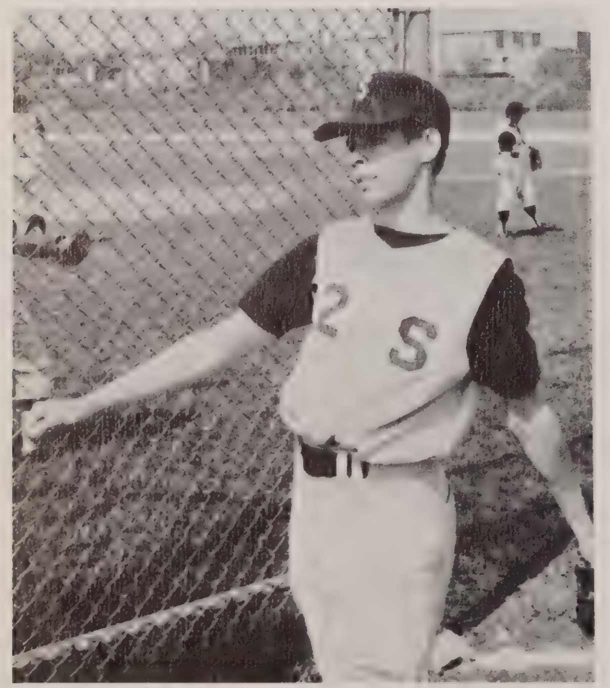
As Coach Kleminich surveys action elsewhere on the dimond, Butch Vuona practices his southpaw swing on the sidelines. Butch possesses all the credentials of a good outfielder: speed, excellent range, and a strong throwing arm.



Junk-throwing Vinnie Moore loosens up for the upcoming tough nine innings. Vinnie sets up the batters with an assortment of slow pitches, then sets them down with a sneaky fastball.



All infielders must have strong arms to be able to rifle the ball across the diamond. Utility infielder Terry Paddock limbers up his wing.

Càtcher John McNamara and fireballing southpaw Bob Catalina get their signals straightened out as they prepare for a grueling game.

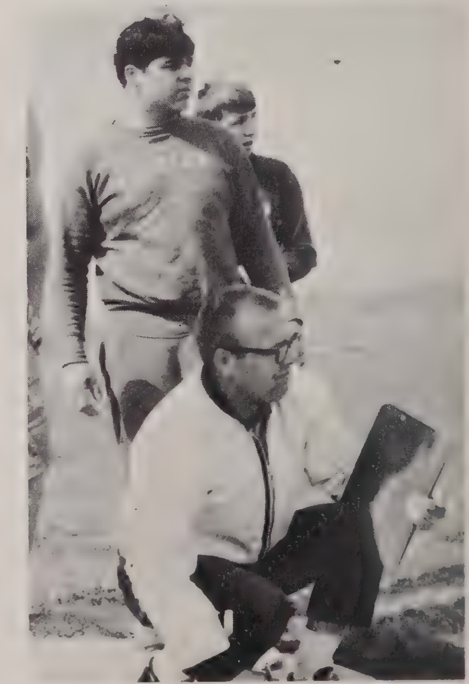
As Jim Farnell looks on, Coach Liljegren records the finish of an event at a SHS track meet.

Track is actually one large sport with many small ones contained within it. This is where a good coach comes in. A good coach must have a knowledge of all phases of track: running, jumping, field events. Shrewsbury High School has such an instructor in Arthur Liljegren. He knows the areas in which his trackmen are strong and does his best to develop their talents. Whether it be in the running or field events, Coach Liljegren is always willing to lend his services. These are the ingredients that make an able track coach; these are the ingredients that Coach Liljegren possesses.



With a pained expression on his face, Coach Liljegren measures a throw during the shot put competition.

Cinders

John Brisebois breaks the tape ahead of the rest of the field to bring SHS a victory in the half-mile run.

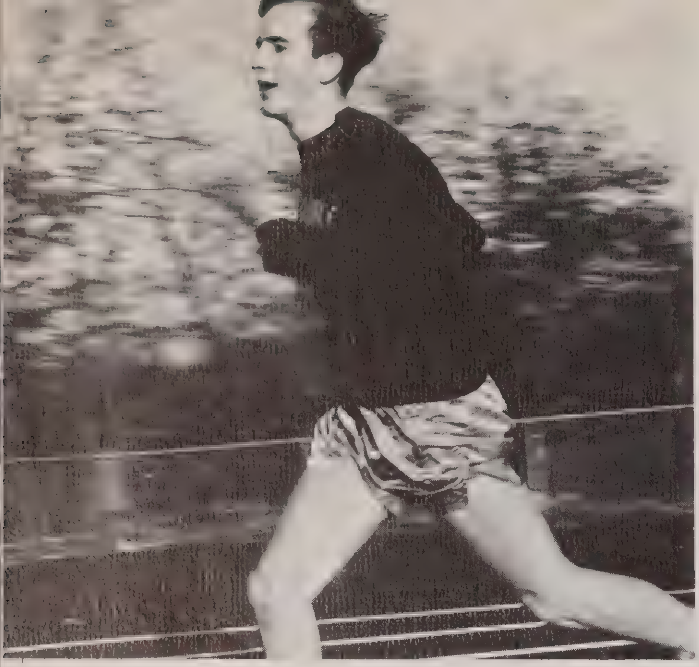
A number of runners nervously await the starter's gun, knowing very well that only one will emerge victorious.

Concentration is an important part of a trackman's performance. A grim Phil Belanger approaches the high jump bar . . .

. . . and successfully clears it.

Dennis Kokernak winds up in an effort to throw the discus a l-o-n-g way.

A few of Shrewsbury High's able performers take a brief rest from their rugged daily routine.



The loneliness of the . . .

The Long

Cross Country is perhaps the least publicized of all the high school sports. Hardly anyone except the runners themselves care about the results of the meets. These harriers do not receive the publicity as do the players in the major sports. The cross country runner competes because he loves it and he is probably the unsung hero of his school's athletic teams.

Guy Ferrante applies a bit of "body English" as he tries to sink an important putt.

Golf today is a major source of relaxation and exercise. In addition to this, the Shrewsbury High golfers also compete in actual matches. As a high school sport, golf is not widely followed by the general public. However, these linksmen are tough competitors and try just as hard as players in major sports to bring home victory for Shrewsbury High School.

While carefully lining up a putt, John Gaston is a study in concentration.

A tense Sam Simonian prepares to knock in a crucial putt.

With the transformation of summer into autumn comes the exhilarating field hockey season—leg-padded goalies, swift-moving inners, and dodging wings combining their efforts together as a team. Agility, quick thinking, and zest characterize the Shrewsbury High School field hockey players who utilize these qualities to meet the challenge of competition with visiting teams. To the seniors their last field hockey season represents a rich remembrance of vitality and endurance.

Our Junior Prom

The fantasy . . . a dream becomes a reality as sophisticated juniors step into an oriental world of exotic gardens and hanging lanterns. We cross the threshold to a memorable evening of romantic dancing, congenial chatter, and magic enchantment.

Amidst the theme of gold and orange we gather about the gilded bridge before the night's festivities begin. Soon girls in their elegant gowns will be dancing with their escorts around this miniature paradise, while onlookers talk quietly at the tables.

An important part of the evening consists of socializing with each other. For a moment of relaxation many couples retire to the tables. Between dances Janet McArdle and Carole Rano chat with Tony Russell and Jimmy Camyre.

Throughout the evening couples dance to the soft, romantic music of Bob Nelson and his orchestra. To one of the medleys Wendy Midgley dances with David Snow, Janet Haynes with Michael Collins, Sharon Pehl with John McNamara, and Christine Hedlund with Paul Daly.

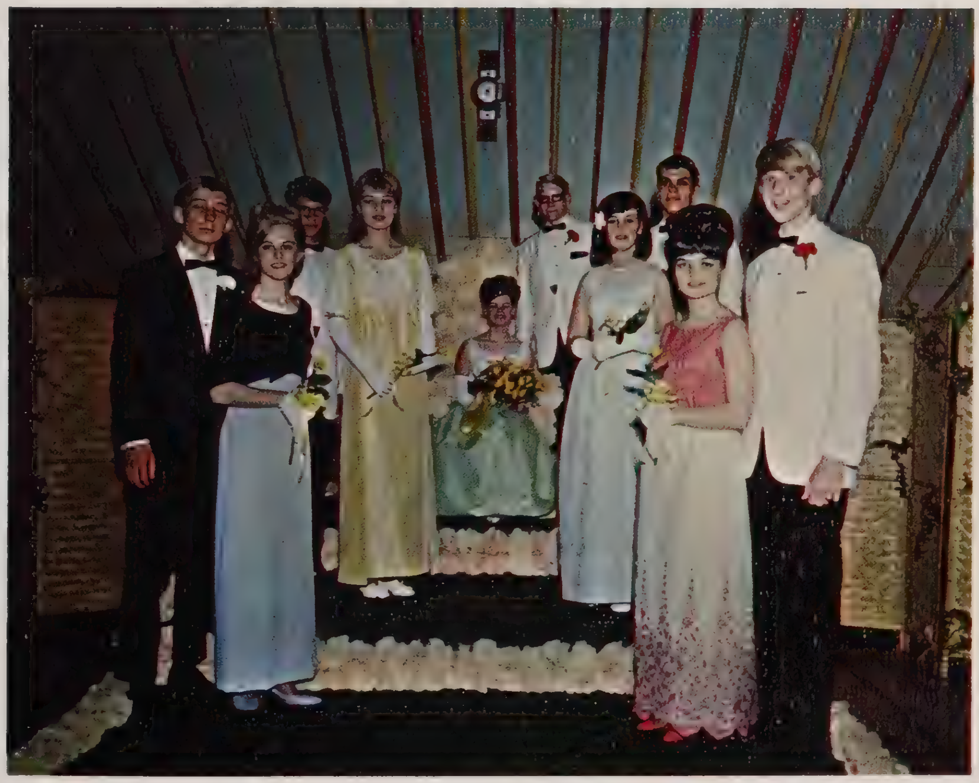
May 20, 1966

The Grand March is the climax of the evening. Expectation mounts as a few radiant girls receive their numbers.

The lucky ten are Diane Horne, June Messina, Susan Brodeur, Jan Daggett, Linda McCarthy, Priscilla Lane, Cynthia Parker, Jane Prout, Martha Deering, and Susan Bath.

All await the decision of the judges.

Shadows of the Evening



A hush falls over the anticipating crowd. One by one the court is formed—Martha Deering . . . Linda McCarthy . . . Priscilla Lane . . . Jane Prout. Together with their escorts, the girls prepare to greet the queen. The long-awaited moment arrives as Susan Bath is chosen to reign over us. Susan's escort, Richard Stone, accompanies her to the royal throne where she receives a beautiful bouquet of delicate yellow roses.

Our evening comes to a proper end, and as the moon sets sophisticated juniors drift away storing precious moments forever and ever. A reality becomes a memory . . . OUR FANTASY.

"The Miracle

"I wanted to teach you—oh, everything the earth is full of, everything on it that's ours for a wink and it's gone, and we are on it, the — light we bring to it and leave behind in — words, everything we feel, think, know — and share, in words."
The language and spirit of the theatre became part of our class as we prepared our junior play, "The Miracle Worker," for its performances on November 19 and 20, 1965. The long hours of work and endless mass of troublesome details seemed to charge us with energy and love, rather than tire us. The reward was not only financial success for the Class of 1967, but a pride in something well earned and well done.

The Kellers (Jeff Apfel and Dena Lapriore) watch anxiously as Helen (Jane Prout) and Annie Sullivan (Martha Deering) begin their first struggle—definitely the most difficult and well know scene of the play.

The cast assembles for the well earned flowers and applause of Saturday night.

The play is over—there is a bittersweet joy in the final tears and congratulations.

"Spirit

To celebrate a victorious season, couples crowd the floor to dance to the music of Perry Conte.

Toward the end of the evening, the mood changes from relaxation to excitement as the Grand March begins. Senior girls, Marcia McOwen, Nancy Hepburn, and Linda Brown, clasp hands with their escorts during the March.

Shrewsbury football fans, once a noisy, rambunctious crowd attending those Saturday afternoon games, become more dignified and refined in their praise on November 25, 1966. With the "Spirit Untold," Shrewsbury High School students and their guests attend the annual Victory Dance to honor a winning team. An excellent 8-1 record, resulting in the Class "B" Championship, provides an opportunity for a more festive celebration. The credit for this overwhelming accomplishment is justly given to three coaches and their team.

Formal presentation of awards is the highlight of the evening as a selected few are chosen in recognition for outstanding performances. Deserving a special "thanks" and congratulations are those who have worn their uniforms for the last time—the seniors.

With the choosing of the queen and the cutting of the victory cake, one more football season comes to a close. Already a new team with new hopes is becoming a growing part in those who will play and those who will cheer in 1967.

SHREWSBURY 1966 VICTORY

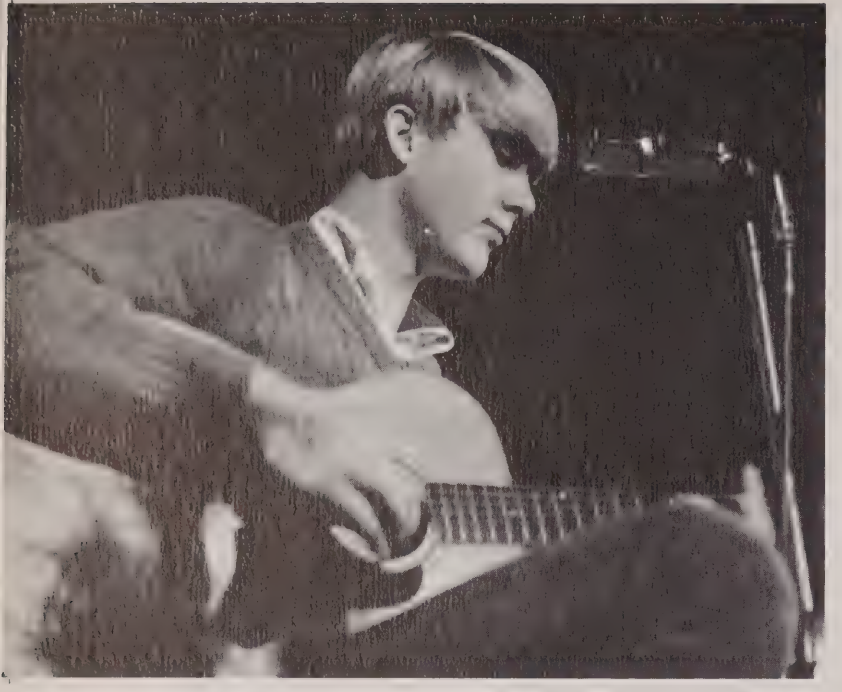
Sing Out!



"I am a rock. I am an island."

"When love is gentle, then love is kind."

It is that time again. The football season is almost over. But there is one more game, and all are hoping to end the season with a smashing victory. On a cold night in November, SHS students swarm into the gym to urge their team on to its eighth victory by raising school spirit through song. To salute the team, the fans sing along with a wide array of students-turned-folk singers. With the performers leading the audience, the 1966 hootenanny begins. Two hours of continuous singing—only a short moment of relaxation for a hopeful group of hard-working boys!

"There is a Meeting Here Tonight"
November 23, 1966

"Come gather round people wherever you roam."

"When we were seventeen . . . But now the days grow short."

It's Definitely Senioritis!

"If only Dave Spratt could see us now."

"This, girls, is a fork, one of the latest innovations in the field of modern cutlery. In your case, Nancy, it will replace the fingers."

"My dog's better than your dog!"

"Don't laugh—someday I might be on the screen with Paul Newman!"

"Fantastic, doctor, the Alodium-Q Space Amodgulator is causing the rotating anterior frammis bracket to stimulate the ultrahigh sensitivity device!!"

"Tweedle-dee-dee
Tweedle-dee-dum"

"Really, Beverly, two hundred dollars is not too much for a slanted recommendation."

"Could it be that I have . . . bad breath?"

"I wonder what form of gastronomical delight is in store for us today?"

"How many times do I have to tell you . . ."

"Peek-a-boo!"

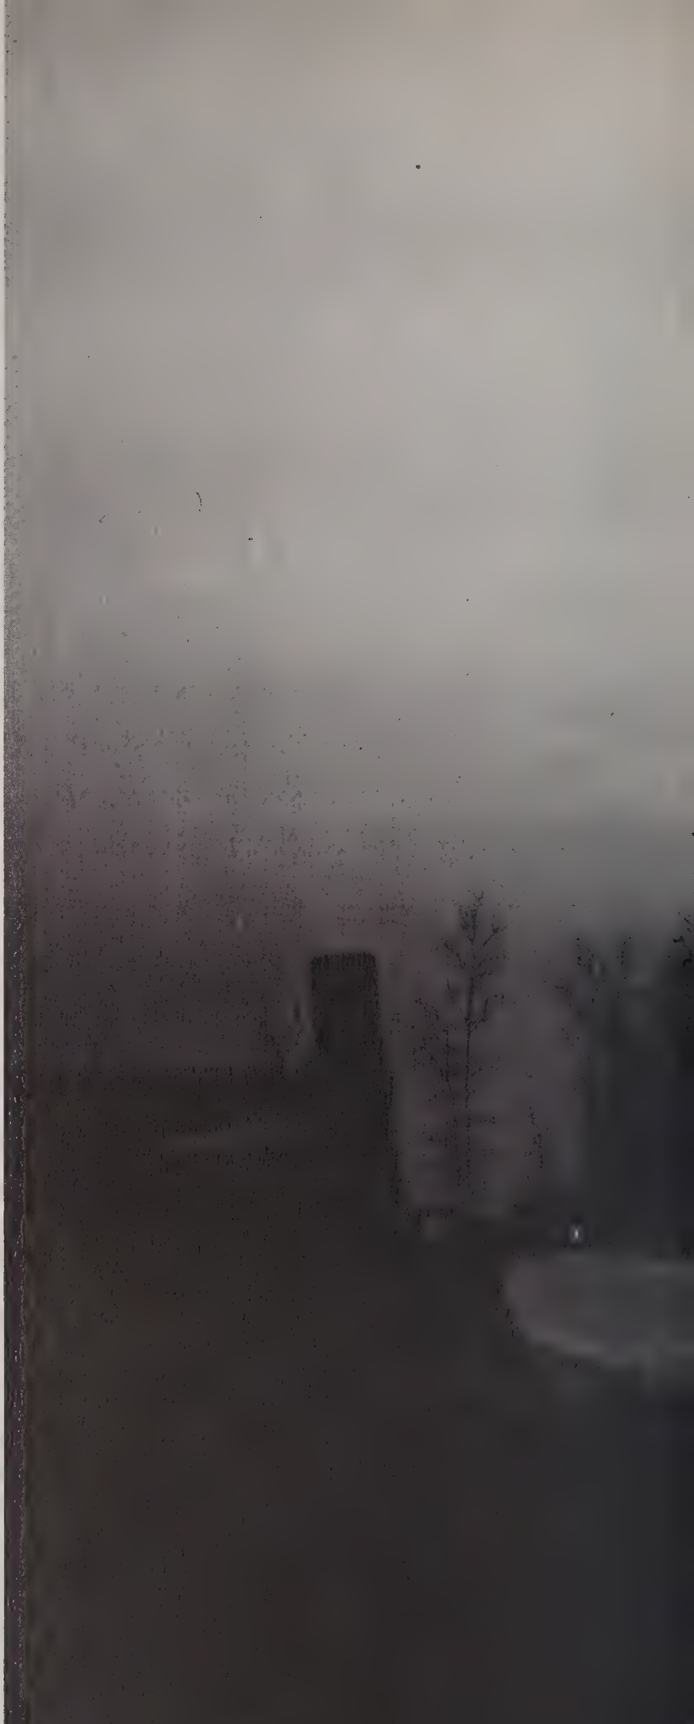
"What is this—a commercial for Red Cross?"

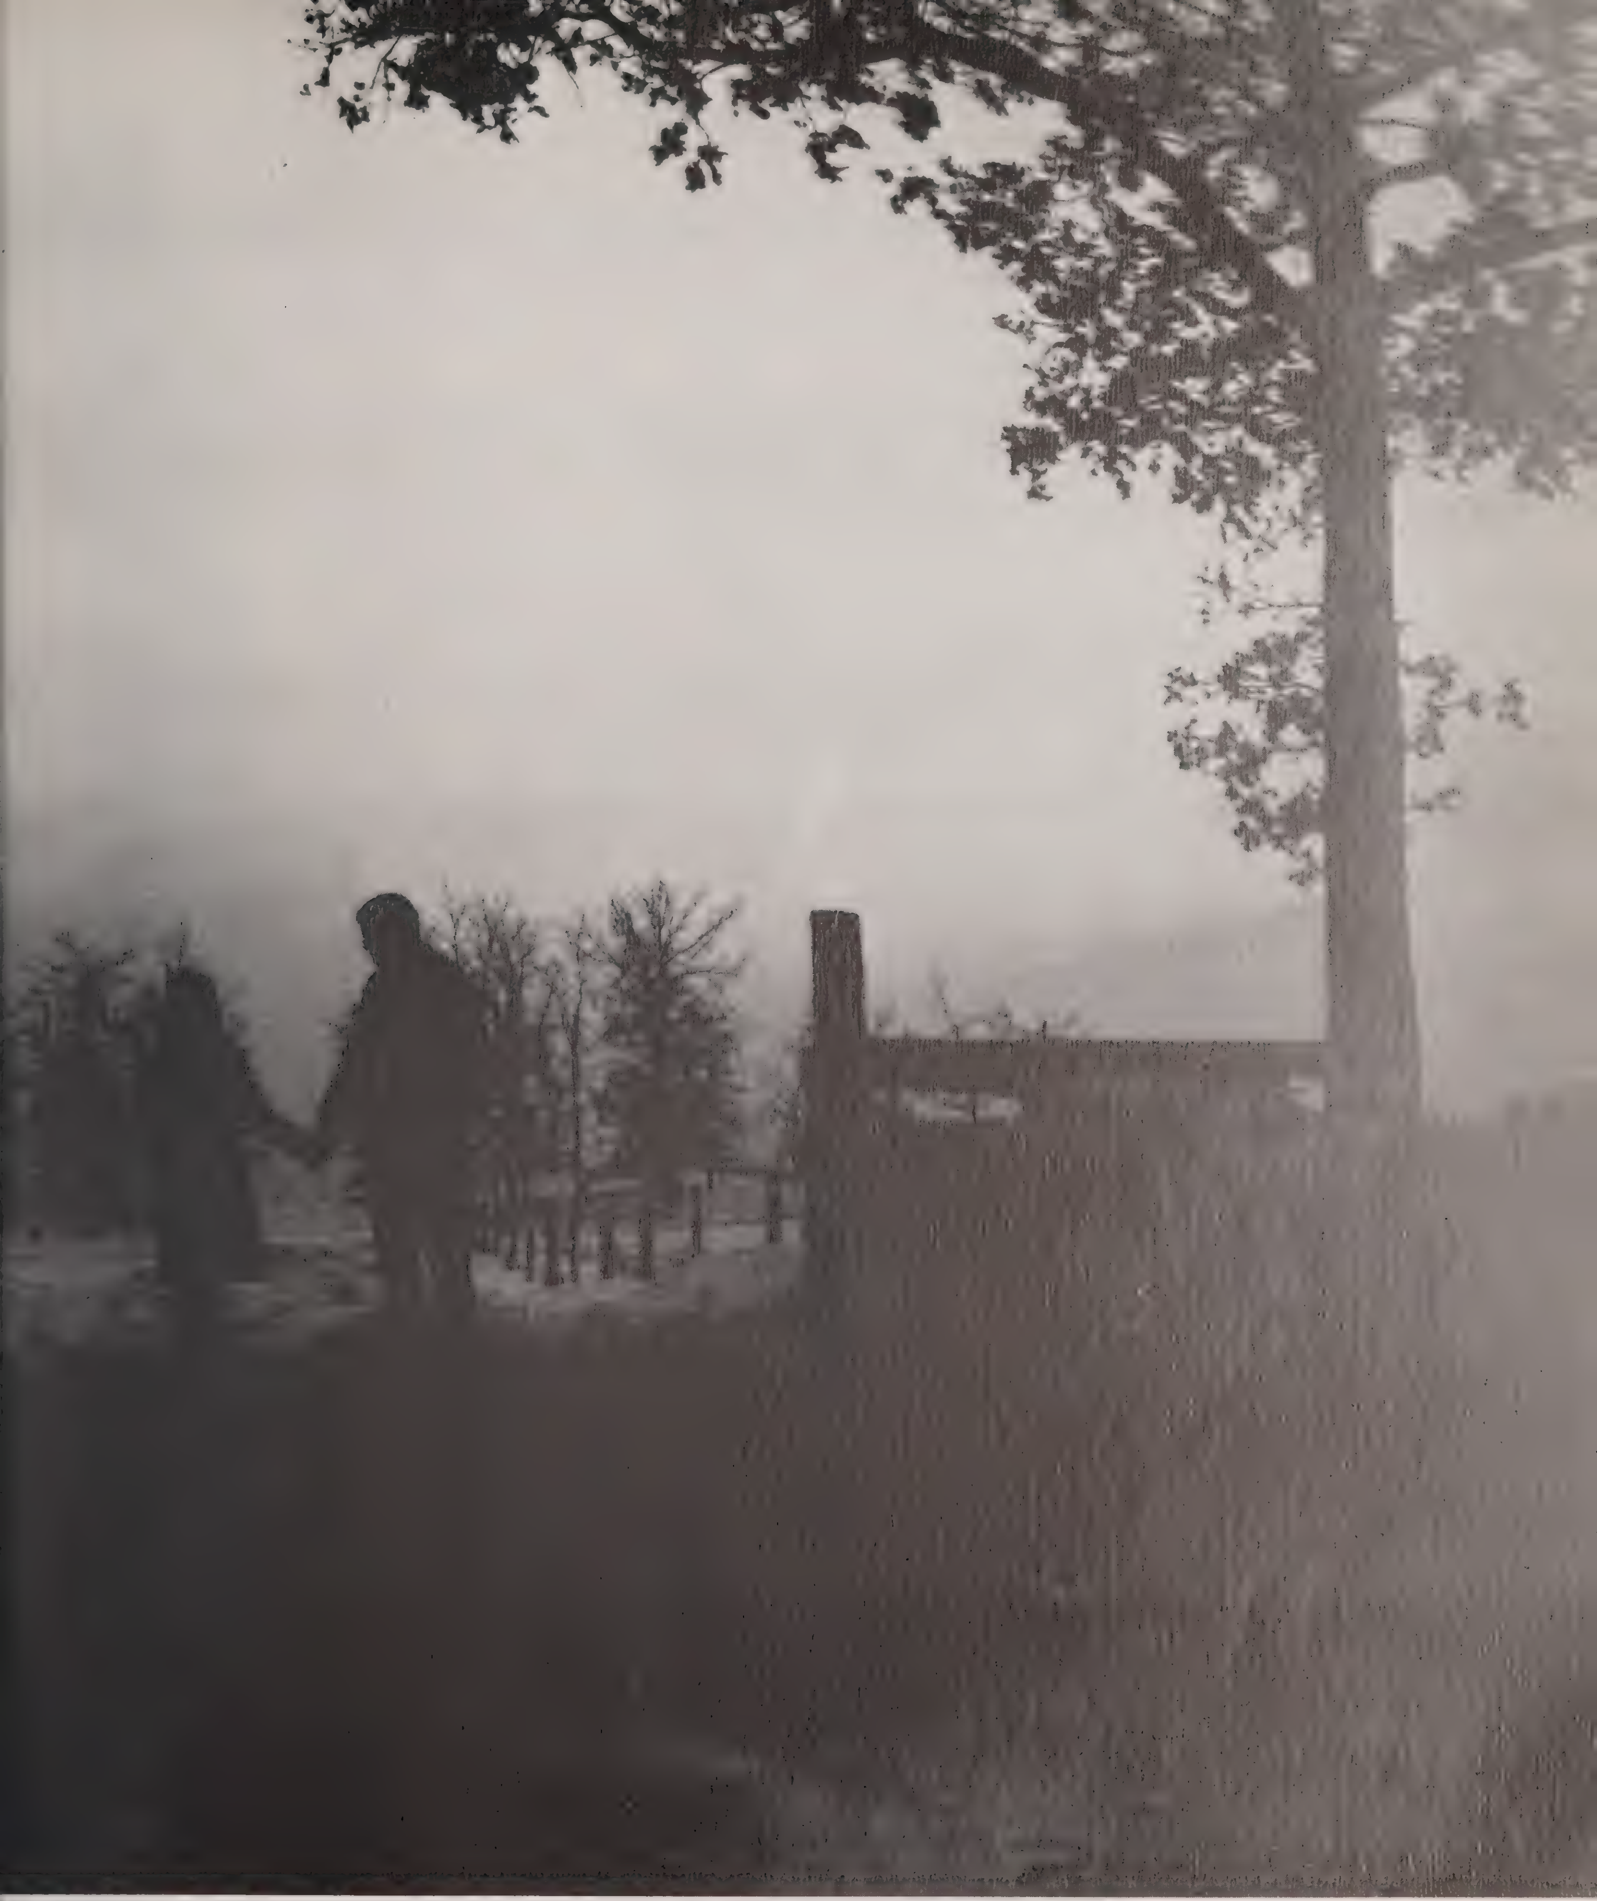
"They're coming to take us away—HO! HO!"

Parting is the saddest of all human experiences. But even in parting, we who are young can never be sad for long, simply because we are young. Youth, as the saying goes, is not a time of life, but a state of mind. It is our special summer place, and it is doubtful that any of us who have lived, worked, and laughed together for four years will ever lose that place.

Yet as wonderful as looking back to our past may be, looking up toward our future is far more thrilling. For we have learned here at SHS that the future is and must be what we ourselves can and must make it. And so this is the real message we leave in parting. We leave determined to do our vital part to make that future so great and so good as it should be for ourselves and all who follow.

With this sense of loyalty and purpose, the Class of 1967 says farewell.





"Farewell to you and the youth I have spent with you.
It was but yesterday we met in a dream."
